our hotel

Here at the Hampton Inn®: hotel in Bowling Green, we take pride that our city is a little different from most other towns. After all, who knew our town, built on the edge of "The Great Black Swamp", would one day hit oil and blossom into one of the prettiest spots in Ohio? Who would have thought that an oil town would then become one of the greenest cities in America, harnessing the wind to generate power? And what one small-town college can claim a range of celebrities from Emmy-award-winning actors to Olympic gold medalists?

where to go and what to do

Bowling Green was named after Bowling Green, Kentucky, but that's where our similarity with any other town stops. We're a city that prides itself on individuality-you have to have confidence to build your town in a place called "The Great Black Swamp." But build it we did (and drained much of the swamp). And lo, our town proved to be a lucky spot. Not only did we hit oil and gas in the early 20th century, but we also landed Bowling Green State University-a school that has proven a knack for developing famous people (including actors Tim Conway and Eva Marie Saint).
