where to go and what to do

Founded in 1769, the area around our hotel in Bangor was first visited by the French explorer Samuel de Champlain who sailed up the Penobscot River in 1604. He described the area as "most pleasant and agreeable." Today, we think you'll agree with his 400-year-old assessment. Many of our architectural treasures have been preserved. You'll see a range of beautiful styles, from Colonial to Second Empire, along the Broadway Historic District. To see some of the natural beauty Champlain hinted at, explore the Field Pond Audubon Center, a 192-acre preserve with its own pristine island.
