our hotel

Founded on a ford of the Kentucky River, the state capital of Kentucky holds a special place in Bluegrass Country. From the stately capitol building and governor's mansion to its distillery heritage and Daniel Boone's grave site, Frankfort holds a stunning collection of sites to explore.

directions to our hotel

From I-75: 64 west, exit 53B onto Highway 127 and travel one block. From Louisville: 64 East to exit 53B, onto Highway 127 and travel one block.

where to go and what to do

The first English explorers began nosing about Frankfort in the early 1750s, though the site wasn't settled as the state capital until 1792. Our first statehouse burned in 1813. The second burned in 1824. The third time was the charm, and you can still see the "Old Capitol" here in town. The "New Capitol," dedicated in 1910, is considered one of the country's most beautiful-its Beaux Arts style features many murals and statues of Kentucky's most famous citizens. While you're there, be sure to see the Floral Clock, a 34-foot diameter timepiece made from thousands of flowers on the West Lawn. For candies with a kick, swing by Rebecca Ruth Candy & Tours.
